Return Tide of Summer Travel Brings Back Many Members of Diplomatic Corps, Who Add to the Seashore Gayeties.

THE tide of summer travel is turning. Each incoming steamer brings distinguished Americans who have spent the early summer touring Europe in automobiles or resting after the fashionable London season at resorts on the Continent. In the past few weeks many of the diplomats who departed early in the summer have arrived at the summer quarters of the embassies and taken their places in society.

Bachelors in the diplomatic corps are always in demand at entertainments, and their return to America is, indeed, a boon to harrowed hostesses who have to struggle against the unfortunate scarcity of available men when plans are being considered for entertainments and lists are made out.

Newport certainly misses the members of the diplomatic set who in former years added so much to the pleasant life there. Unfortunately, each year finds a few more delinquents, for it must be admitted that the majority prefer less formal forms of entertainment in the holiday time than life at Newport affords, or else they enter it only for the height of the season, during the fortnight in August. The French ambassador, J. J. Jusserand, has relegated his official duties for the summer to the able management of the countess of the embassy, Mme. de Portes de la Fosse, and this year M. des Portes and Count de Chambrun arrived last week from his vacation abroad. The Viscount de Martel is now in France, where he went to join his charming wife. The Viscountess went in May to France, where her infant daughter, under the care of her grandmother, was confined. The countess of the embassy, Mme. de Portes de la Fosse, is a French noblewoman of the old school, and her husband, the Viscount de Martel, is a French nobleman of the old school. They are both of the old school, and their daughter, the Viscountess de Martel, is a French noblewoman of the old school.

The Viscountess de Martel was a great social favorite here last winter, her cleverness soon making a place for her among the younger married set and leaders of the smart contingent. She is exceedingly chic in appearance, vivacious, and entertaining, evincing great enthusiasm in all forms of entertainment.

The Closson studio, in Lobster lane, at Magnolia, has always been a popular place to stop while walking to and from the beach, but this year it is more than ever so, owing to the presence of the artist's bride, who was Mrs. Gallaudet Kendall, of Washington, daughter of the head of Kendall Green.

Mr. and Mrs. Closson are at home every Friday afternoon, and the studio is always filled with a goodly number of their personal friends, and every day both friends and strangers wander in to view the pictures and become acquainted with the charming new chateaux of the place. Mrs. Closson is a delightful hostess and a woman of strong personality, most interesting to meet.

Mr. Closson has a number of new pastels and oils which are attracting much attention. His mermaid claims the interest of the fanciful and the mystery-loving. It represents a mermaid sitting on a rock jutting from the sea. Just the woman's form is seen arising from the water, as she sits directly in the path of the moonlight. In fact it is the broad wake of the moon that first claims one's attention, and then the mermaid, who is upon the painting in study, that the maid is seen. If one is a lover of this coast, one is quite willing to swear that the mermaid is a frequent visitor of the rocky shore, and is just around the corner, hiding among the rocks, any moonlight night, ready to slip back into the sea at the approach of a mortal.

Another most popular picture of Mr. Closson's is a view of the sea skirted by rocks, and a group of pine trees, done in pastel, a favorite with the artist, who refuses to sell it.

While the visit of Prince Wilhelm of Sweden was, of course, the all-absorbing event to the residents of Newport, the early part of the week was given over to the national tennis tournament which was played at the Casino. Not in many years has the attendance been so large. Moreover, the bright skies and delightful weather brought out many charming costumes on the opening day.

Cards issued at Newport for the wedding of Miss von Unschuld, the pianist, read like a page from "Who's Who." Maybe it's an Austrian custom to tell the story of your life in your wedding invitation, but it is to be hoped the style will not be adopted in this country. It might some time prove embarrassing. The invitation is as follows: "The pleasure of your presence is requested at the marriage of Marie Unschuld Edle von Neufeld, court pianist to her majesty the Queen of Romania, president of the director of the University of Music and Dramatic Art in Washington, D. C., daughter of his excellency the last Imperial and royal Austrian Field Marshal Lieut. Wenzel Unschuld Ritter von Melanfeld, to M. Henry Lazzard, vice president of the University of Music and Dramatic Art in Washington, D. C., Saturday morning, August 31, 1907, at 12 o'clock, New Cliff Hotel, Newport, R. I."

The Horse Show at Bar Harbor, after the fashionable set there looked forward for some time, came off last week, opening on Tuesday and being the occasion for gathering of society people in numbers unprecedented in the history of past years. It not only was the occasion for the display of fine horsemanship, but brought forth some very chic and elaborate gowns. Miss Dorothy Forbes, of Boston, one of the blue ribbon winners, was exceedingly clever in the handling of the reins on the opening day.

The twenty-fifth birthday of Emperor Francis Joseph was celebrated in Chicago last Monday, when the consul general for Austria-Hungary, Mr. Alexander de Nuber, gave a dinner in honor of the event. The table was decorated with Austro-Hungarian colors, and the national flag was raised over the hotel where the affair took place. Mr. de Nuber's guests were Dr. Otto Graf, Mr. Guido Sabetta, Italian consul; Dr. Paul Ruhl, acting consul for Germany, and Baron Friedrich Holler, German vice consul.

News of the death of Frau von Bredow, wife of Lieut. Waldemar Leopold von Bredow, of the cuirassiers of the Guard of the German army, and daughter of Senator Francis G. Newlands, of Nevada, cast a deep gloom over members of the ner Harrison, of the university, and a daughter of a present professor. She is a descendant of the Carters, Lewises, Harrisons, and other prominent families along the lower James River, who lived and died in the famous old mansions of Shirley, Brandon, Berkeley, and others.

The historic battlefield of Bull Run was the scene of a pretty wedding Tuesday noon, the contracting parties being Mr. Robert A. Hoal and Miss Ada C. Matthews, both of Roanoke, Va. The ceremony was performed at the home of the mother of Mrs. Hoal, the famous "stone house," about which the battle raged with such fury more than forty-five years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Hoal are now in this city, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Hawkins, at their home, 223 Twelfth street southwest, and before returning to Roanoke, where they will reside, they will spend several days at the Jamestown Exposition.

An exceedingly pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday at noon at the home of the bride, 1266 P street, the contracting parties being Miss Sue Catherine Wynkoop and Mr. Achilles Saffario. Rev. W. H. Chapman performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by only the immediate family. The maid of honor was Miss Margarette Saffario, a sister of the groom, and Mr. Frank Wynkoop, of Hamilton, Va., a brother of the bride, acted as best man. Miss Wynkoop's wedding and traveling costume was made of brown tulle silk, with hat and gloves to match.

Miss Wynkoop is the daughter of Mrs. J. W. Beane, of Fairfax, Va., and is a popular and beautiful young lady. Her home was formerly in Loudoun County, Va., where she also has hosts of friends. Mr. Saffario is a draftsman and a member of the engineering corps at the District government building. He was graduated from Central High School in Washington in 1906, and is now attending Central High School, and later at a student of civil engineering at Lehigh University, in Bethlehem, Pa. Mr. Saffario made an enviable reputation as a basketball player, and was also prominent in other forms of athletics. He was captain of the first basketball team organized in Central High School. Mr. Saffario is also well known to the local baseball enthusiasts of this vicinity as a player in the Sunday league. He is now a member of the team from Mount Vernon Sunday school.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Saffario left for a ten days' stay at Atlantic City. After which they will visit for three weeks with Mrs. Saffario's relatives and friends in Loudoun County, Va.

Hunter, Fifth United States Cavalry, and Mrs. Hunter, took place in the quarters of the commanding officer at Fort Wingate, N. Mex., August 14, at 3 o'clock p. m. Chaplain C. C. Bateman, of Fort Bayard, N. Mex., officiating. The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. She was gowned in white crepe de chine and carried a bouquet of white roses. The rooms were beautifully decorated, constituting an appropriate and charming setting to the impressive scene. The wedding gifts, coming from every part of the country and our insular possessions, were profuse and represented a wide range of utility and ornamental treasure. Besides the officers and ladies of the garrison there were guests from several points in the Southwest. Mrs. Carter, mother of the groom, was present from Chicago. The dining-room was filled by a joyful throng, and while graciously accepting the congratulations of all, the bride cut the wedding cake with her husband's saber. Letters and telegrams poured in from many directions prior and subsequent to the ceremony. Amid a shower of rice and a chorus of God-speeds, the happy couple left late in the afternoon for the Grand Canyon where they will reside at the Philippine Islands September 5, with the Sixth Cavalry, to which regiment Lieut. Carter belongs.
